PRODUCER/DIRECTOR: Lucinda Gyurci has been fascinated with music ever since she could reach the keys on her grandmother's player piano. Since then, she has accompanied Opera Singers to Lounge Singers, arranged and written music, and sang with choirs by audition: Sweet Adelines, Cathedral Basilica/Schola of St. Louis, and 10 Seasons with the St. Louis Symphony Chorus—performing at Carnegie Hall a few times, cutting Grammy nominated CDs and meeting Kay Love through whom she founded the Arts organization, ARTS FOR LIFE, created the Best Performance Awards for Musical Theatre and the Theatre Mask Awards for Comedy and Drama in St. Louis. Lucinda studied music theory with Alycia Davis, MFA and music composition with John Foley, SJ, PhD who when reviewing her early Christian compositions remarked, “It sounds a lot like Broadway”. Besides all the fun stuff, Lucinda has done some interesting things like graduate from the St. Louis College of Pharmacy, 3 years postgraduate Clinical Psychology at St. Louis University and studied for a master's in Theology at Aquinas Institute of Theology in St. Louis. Now, she would really like to see a choir loft at St. Cecilia Church, establish a Ragtime Museum in Scott Joplin's St. Louis, and finish her book collaboration with K. Ann O'Brien entitled, Growing Up Theatre in St. Louis.

This is just a sampling of the many performers, technicians and talent for A Festival of Hymns and Sacred Songs November 11, 12, and 13—6pm Friday; 2pm and 6pm Saturday, and 1pm Sunday. More bios to come and the visiting choirs from local churches are to be announced.
